

Hank & Billye Suber Aaron

Young Scholars Summer Research Institute

The Aaron Summer Research Institute is a four-week program that provides high school students enrolled in Durham Public Schools the opportunity to enhance their writing, research, and presentation skills.

The program's main focus is on the development of the students' research, writing, presentation, and critical-inquiry skills. These skills prepare students to present their research during a capstone presentation at the conclusion of the program.

Scan the QR code to our website for more information about the program and for the application.

If you have any questions, email kennedy.ruff@duke.edu.

The program is sponsored by the Samuel DuBois Cook Center in Social Equity at Duke University in partnership with Durham Public Schools (DPS). One of the Cook Center's central mission is to help high school students explore the economic, social, and political disciplines of inequality.